Executive Summary

Innovation will be the key driving force in future.

The manufacturing industry is set to change significantly over the next ten to twelve years. There will be a significant shift from manufacturing in one country-single location to many county-many locations as companies seek to localize production. The large labour cost differentials that proved so attractive in encouraging companies from developed nations to shift or outsource manufacturing to emerging economies would have eroded.. Manufacturing will have moved away from mass-production towards greater specialization as companies seek to find more profitable ground higher up the supply chain. There will be significant amount of new opportunities for small and mid-sized manufacturers. Will Indian manufacturers able to seize this opportunity?

The GMCV 2020 vision is an effort to initiate discussion and debate, to propose a new framework for thinking about the future of Indian manufacturing and of this region in particular. With careful planning and preparation, Indian manufacturers can position themselves for competitive advantage.

GMCV 2020 was created in the back-drop of INTEC exposition to identify the key issues that will shape the future of Indian manufacturing and the action we should be taking now to ensure that we don't miss out on the opportunities that lie ahead. CODISSIA along with Texas Ventures agreed to lead the support because it believes passionately in the importance of manufacturing and in the future of the India as a manufacturing nation and Coimbatore as manufacturing hub.
